A FAIR FIELD.

In a communication elsewhere printed C. D. Whitney makes a very happy representation of the name of George W. Pierce, the asylum farmer, as a candidate for town representative from Brattleboro. All that Mr. Whitney says of Mr. Pierce is true, and should Mr. Pierce be in nomination he would receive and receive a cordial support, not only as an active, progressive farmer, but as a strong, upright, and intelligent man and citizen. The question being thus open for discussion it is a matter of justice to a large number of Brattleboro Republicans to say that many of them have expressed a wish to see Hon. J. L. Martin sent to the legislature from this town this fall. The reasons why Mr. Martin's choice would be an especially fitting one are apparent. His long experience in the house, and in the speaker's chair, while a resident of Londonderry, has made him perfectly familiar with legislative work, so that he would take a leading position from the start, and would be of great service to the town and state in formulating and pushing forward the business of the session. Probably no other man could be so useful in this respect, or so surely give Brattleboro a leading position. He possesses, moreover, a strong personality, and enjoys a wide popularity both here at home and throughout the state.

With this said in behalf of Mr. Martin and his friends, the field is fairly open. The caucus, with the polls remaining open five hours, will give full opportunity for every Republican to express his personal choice, and either Mr. Pierce or Mr. Martin being in nomination, the party should be perfectly united and give its candidates cordial support and a strong majority.

TOWN REPRESENTATIVE.

Editor of The Phoenix:—As the time draws near for the nomination and election of town representative it seems wise to consider whom we will choose as our legislator the coming two years. A call will appear in this issue of The Phoenix for a caucus at which the ballot box will be open from 3 to 8 p. m., allowing any and every voter in town to deposit his choice for a candidate. It is well to have this caucus the deliberate expression of the wishes of the voters of our town, that the election which follows may be an expression of the demands of the majority.

It has often been said that if legislation in Vermont did not do the farmer justice it is the fault of farmers themselves, because they are largely in the majority and can carry any measure they see fit to unite on. Of course in Brattleboro the majority do not own farms, neither can the farmers of this town carry out their own measures by farmer votes alone. Still there should be no antagonism of interests between farmers and mechanics or business men. Farmer votes have gone with village votes always and no quarrel exists. The farmers of Brattleboro do not ask for favors as a class, but being members one with another in this town they are willing to be acknowledged sometimes and when they can select a farmer who combines with his agricultural knowledge a wide knowledge of the law and the dweller in town, why they simply ask for their lining when their turn comes.

Brattleboro will demand for its representative a man who is not so old that he cannot see that some things are new, a man not so partisan but that he can see there is advanced ground for even his own party to take, and one who, having convictions, will stand by them.

To the young men of Brattleboro we can offer a young and worthy leader, to those who are older we give an able counselor, and to all an upright man. When the ballot boxes are open in caucus on Saturday, Aug. 20, we hope every voter in town who chooses the farmer and man, George W. Pierce, as the candidate for town representative for Brattleboro, will deposit his ballot to signify such choice. Mr. Pierce is worthy, not only of the votes of his party, but of the votes of all his townsmen, and if Mr. Marshall will give over to Mr. Pierce this year as many Democratic votes as were loaned to him two years ago of Republican votes, that will be "square."

Very respectfully,
C. D. WHITMAN.

How the Cold Facts Tally with his Imaginative Flights.

The Untermyers were treated to a dose of (to them) refreshing, calm, perspicacious and fallacious argument, at the town hall last night, from "Hon." J. C. Moneghan, a Providence, R. I., young man who was a German consul under the Cleveland administration. Mr. Moneghan is a ready speaker, but unfortunately found his arguments more on imagination than on fact. What he had to say about wages in Germany was very amusing to the former residents of that country. His statement that in some lines of work the men of Germany receive two or three dollars more per week than in this country undoubtedly should be amended to read that they receive two or three more marks per week than they do dollars in this, but when it is known that a mark is only about 25 cents the force of the argument is realized. Mr. Moneghan pictured Australia as a country of unexampled prosperity, in fact to his excited imagination it was fairly rolling in wealth. Melbourne papers, published six weeks ago and revivified the Phoenix office, stated that it did not verify this idea. On the contrary many columns in these papers are devoted to accounts of the scarcity of work, and of the prevailing distress among the working classes. Thousands of men are unemployed, and their families are suffering from want. Many relief funds have been established, and the churches are converted into soup kitchens for those who are suffering from hunger. In one of these Melbourne papers is an article on the meeting of parliament, and the opening paragraph is as follows:

"The desirability of approaching the government with a view to securing a general revision of the tariff during the present session, so as to protect the interests of the manufacturing industries, was discussed at a meeting of the members of the legislative assembly yesterday at the parliament house."

Mr. Trenwith moved the following proposition: That in the opinion of this meeting the government be asked to revise the tariff this session with a view to give increased protection to the producer. He contended that in the present state of the country, many industries being in a languishing state, increased protection was absolutely necessary.

It would have produced a funny effect last night if this and other extracts from the Melbourne paper had been read.

MRS. ROXANA BRIGGS BAKER.

Mrs. Roxana Baker, most of whose life has been spent in Brattleboro, died Monday at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. D. Leonard, on Oak street.

Mrs. Baker was born in Plymouth, but at an early age came to this place, her home being in the West village until her marriage, at the age of 18, to George Baker, a stone mason. After his death, in 1845, she lived with her daughter, Mrs. Baker, and for the past 15 years with Mrs. Leonard, where her death occurred. She was the oldest of a family of nine children, all of whom she survived. A year ago last October Mrs. Baker suffered an apoplectic stroke, since which time she has been confined to her bed. Last week she was taken severely ill, a general giving way of physical powers being the cause of her death. She was a woman of bright mind, of rare good judgment, of kindly thought and feeling toward all, and though a great sufferer at times, of unusual patience and Christian fortitude. Mrs. Baker was a long-time member of the Methodist church, and the funeral services on Wednesday afternoon were conducted by Rev. A. H. Webb, the burial being in West Brattleboro, where her husband and three children are buried.

SOUTH LONDONDERRY.

L. T. Landman is in his store again, but don't play baseball any yet.

A pleasant reunion of the Landman family took place at Byron Babbitt's on Tuesday of this week, winding up with a brilliant display of fireworks in the evening, which was seen and enjoyed by nearly all the village.

Last Thursday afternoon Alie Shattuck took a teaspoonful of muriatic tincture of iron, by mistake, and was in serious danger for a time, but he is at work again now, though still feeling the effects of the unfortunate dose.

The Doctor Said So.
Early last week Engineer Henry Baldwin, with his wife and young child, went to Sharon to attend the funeral of a sister-in-law. Soon after her arrival there a carbuncle developed on Mrs. Baldwin's lip, and she died early last Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Baldwin was formerly Miss Mabel Ross, a daughter of Engineer Robert Ross of the narrow gauge mixed train, and a woman universally loved and respected in the community. She had been married less than two years, and leaves a little daughter less than six months old.
